

WINTER 2018 / 2019

TETON STEWARDS

NEWSLETTER of the GRAND TETON NATIONAL PARK FOUNDATION

A New Era in Fish Conservation

Winter snows are again blanketing the peaks in Grand Teton National Park, beginning another cycle of accumulation and melt that feed the park's waters and everything dependent upon them. Among the life forms that evolved here, Snake River fine-spotted cutthroat trout enjoy celebrity status.

Robust populations provide a world-renowned, blue-ribbon resource known for its exceptional dry fly fishing. Along with a variety of other resident fishes, cutthroat trout inhabit a rare aquatic ecosystem that is still dominated by native species.

But like many park resources, threats to the long-term viability of Grand Teton's waterways exist. A variety of non-native trout—lake, brown, brook, and rainbow—have been established in the park over the last several decades. These compete with cutthroat trout for food, and rainbow trout, which can hybridize with cutthroats, threaten genetic integrity. Warming temperatures associated with climate change also sound alarms as they could cause expanded distributions of non-native species, increases in pathogens, changes in food web dynamics, and diminished resilience to recreational fishing pressure. Combined with the increasing risk of aquatic invasive species (AIS), which have devastated aquatic systems elsewhere, these challenges have intensified concern among park managers.

With the Foundation's help, in 2015 Grand Teton entered a new era in fish conservation, bringing its commitment to preserve aquatic systems to a new level. Hiring a full-time fish biologist, the park quickly developed a formidable, multifaceted program with a long-term view of protecting and enhancing the ecological function of park fish habitats.

developments and activities. In 2017, after completion of several habitat improvement projects, fish movements between the Snake and twenty-three miles of trout habitat became possible once again.

A variety of stream restoration projects, targeted monitoring and research, and development of long-term conservation plans are now at play, helping to protect park fisheries for future generations of visitors.

Building on recent program successes, including restoring fish passage to over 150 miles of trout habitat through the modification of one dam and removal of another, park biologists went to work on Ditch Creek. This important stream connects the Snake River with trout spawning grounds east of the park, but fish passage had been blocked for over five decades by a variety of human

Other program enhancements have included increased AIS watercraft inspections, non-native fish mitigation activities at Kelly Warm Spring, and entrainment studies designed to evaluate impacts of fish that get trapped in irrigation water diversion systems.

Collaboration and support from Jackson Hole One Fly

Foundation, Patagonia World Trout Initiative, Trout Unlimited, Wyoming Game and Fish Department, and Teton Conservation District reflect the high level of interest in Grand Teton's fish populations and have been instrumental to program successes to date. The Foundation's Wild Treasures campaign will continue to fund fish conservation programs through 2022, helping the park better understand and address current and future stewardship challenges.

For more information about fish conservation and the Wild Treasures campaign, contact Steve Cain at 307-732-0629 or steve@gtncpf.org.

Message from President
LESLIE MATTSON

Leslie and David Vela at the NPS Centennial celebration in August 2016.

During the last five years, I've had the pleasure of working closely with Grand Teton National Park Superintendent David Vela. We've collaborated on significant projects—celebrating the NPS centennial by renewing the Jenny Lake area, purchasing 640 acres of wildlife habitat on Antelope Flats, introducing young and diverse students to NPS careers, and much more.

David has been a wonderful partner and friend, and our work together will continue to impact Grand Teton's visitors for years to come.

In mid-August, David was nominated by the President to be the next National Park Service Director. He is an extraordinary leader whose passion and commitment to our parks and sharing them with people from across the globe is admirable. I am confident David will have great success if he is confirmed in this leadership position, and I wish him all the best as he takes on this important role.

As winter takes hold of Grand Teton National Park, I'm reminded of the very reason I was drawn here in 1990—alpine skiing. This season is one of my favorites in the valley, and as you will see in the pages of this newsletter, improving the local avalanche forecast is a new focus area for the Foundation.

I've witnessed first-hand the increase in popularity of backcountry skiing in the Tetons. As both friends, locals, and visitors continue to ski in Grand Teton, it was an obvious choice to support adding park-specific data to Bridger-Teton Avalanche Center's daily forecast. This additional information—and a new park meteorological technician—will provide backcountry skiers and riders with a better picture of what is happening with the snowpack before making terrain choices. We are proud to support this interagency partnership that will directly benefit our local community.

Looking back on another year at Grand Teton National Park Foundation, my fourteenth serving as president, I am grateful to our many supporters who enable our work in this iconic park year after year. Thank you for your continued dedication to Grand Teton and cheers to 2019!

Park and Foundation Partner to Provide more Information for Winter Backcountry Users

Grand Teton National Park has been a well-known backcountry skiing destination even before Bill Briggs' first winter descent of the Grand in 1971. Today, skiers and snowboarders from across the globe travel to the park seeking powder turns in one of the most dramatic mountain landscapes in the lower forty-eight. The popularity of backcountry skiing has increased significantly during the last several years—a trend that is certainly evident here in the Tetons.

Bridger-Teton National Forest's Avalanche Center (BTAC) has been creating the daily Teton forecast for more than forty years. Prior to this season, BTAC collected and analyzed weather data at various locations throughout the valley, but not in Grand Teton.

"Since the park is a significant portion of the forecast area, we wanted to collaborate with BTAC for the benefit and safety of park visitors," Jenny Lake District Climbing Ranger Scott Guenther said. "With the help of Grand Teton National Park Foundation, we are able to partner with the avalanche center to provide much-needed remote weather stations located within popular skiing terrain in the park."

Two stations—wind and snow—were installed in the Surprise Lake/Disappointment Peak region in late September. Data from these sensors will help inform the daily Teton avalanche forecast and be available on BTAC's website (jhavalanche.org). This will give backcountry skiers and riders information about what is going on with the snowpack in Grand Teton.

In addition to offering more data, the Foundation is supporting a meteorological technician who will make snowpack assessments and observations throughout Grand Teton National Park. The technician will also collaborate with BTAC.

“These new resources will jump-start our effort to improve the daily avalanche hazard forecast for terrain located in Grand Teton National Park,” BTAC Director Bob Comey said. “It will allow the avalanche center to better inform the public, thus enabling park users to make smarter decisions regarding travel in avalanche terrain.”

Backcountry skiers and riders are going to continue to enjoy untouched powder fields and steep lines in Grand Teton National Park for years to come. With the addition of weather data and a meteorological technician, people will be able to make more informed decisions before they hit the skin track.

To learn more and support this effort, contact Maddy Johnson at 307-201-7660 or maddy@gtnpf.org.

Are you Ready to Explore Winter in Grand Teton National Park?

This year marks the sixth consecutive year the Foundation is supporting bi-weekly grooming of the Teton Park Road. The 14-mile stretch between the Bradley-Taggart Trailhead and Signal Mountain provides opportunities for visitors of all ages and abilities to enjoy this extraordinary season by cross country skis, snowshoes, or on foot.

Our Favorite Winter Destinations from the Teton Park Road:

Park at Bradley-Taggart Trailhead

Lucas Fabian Homestead

Roughly 5 miles round trip, less than 100 feet of elevation gain —Travel north along the Teton Park Road from the parking lot. Once you reach the turn-off for the Climber’s Ranch, make your way down the road and cross Cottonwood Creek. Continue north along the west bank of the creek until you reach an open meadow where you will find the historic district.

Jenny Lake

Roughly 9 miles round trip, less than 100 feet of elevation gain
—A full-day tour that will take you gliding by the Cathedral Group to one of Grand Teton’s most famous destinations. From the parking lot, head north and follow signs to South Jenny Lake. This stunning spot is much quieter during winter, making the trek worth the effort.

Park at Signal Mountain Lodge

Signal Mountain

10.4 miles round trip, 700 feet of elevation gain
—From the parking lot, travel south along the Teton Park Road. After approximately one-half mile, the Signal Mountain road will be on your left. Take this snow-covered, ungroomed trail to the summit and enjoy gorgeous vistas along the way.

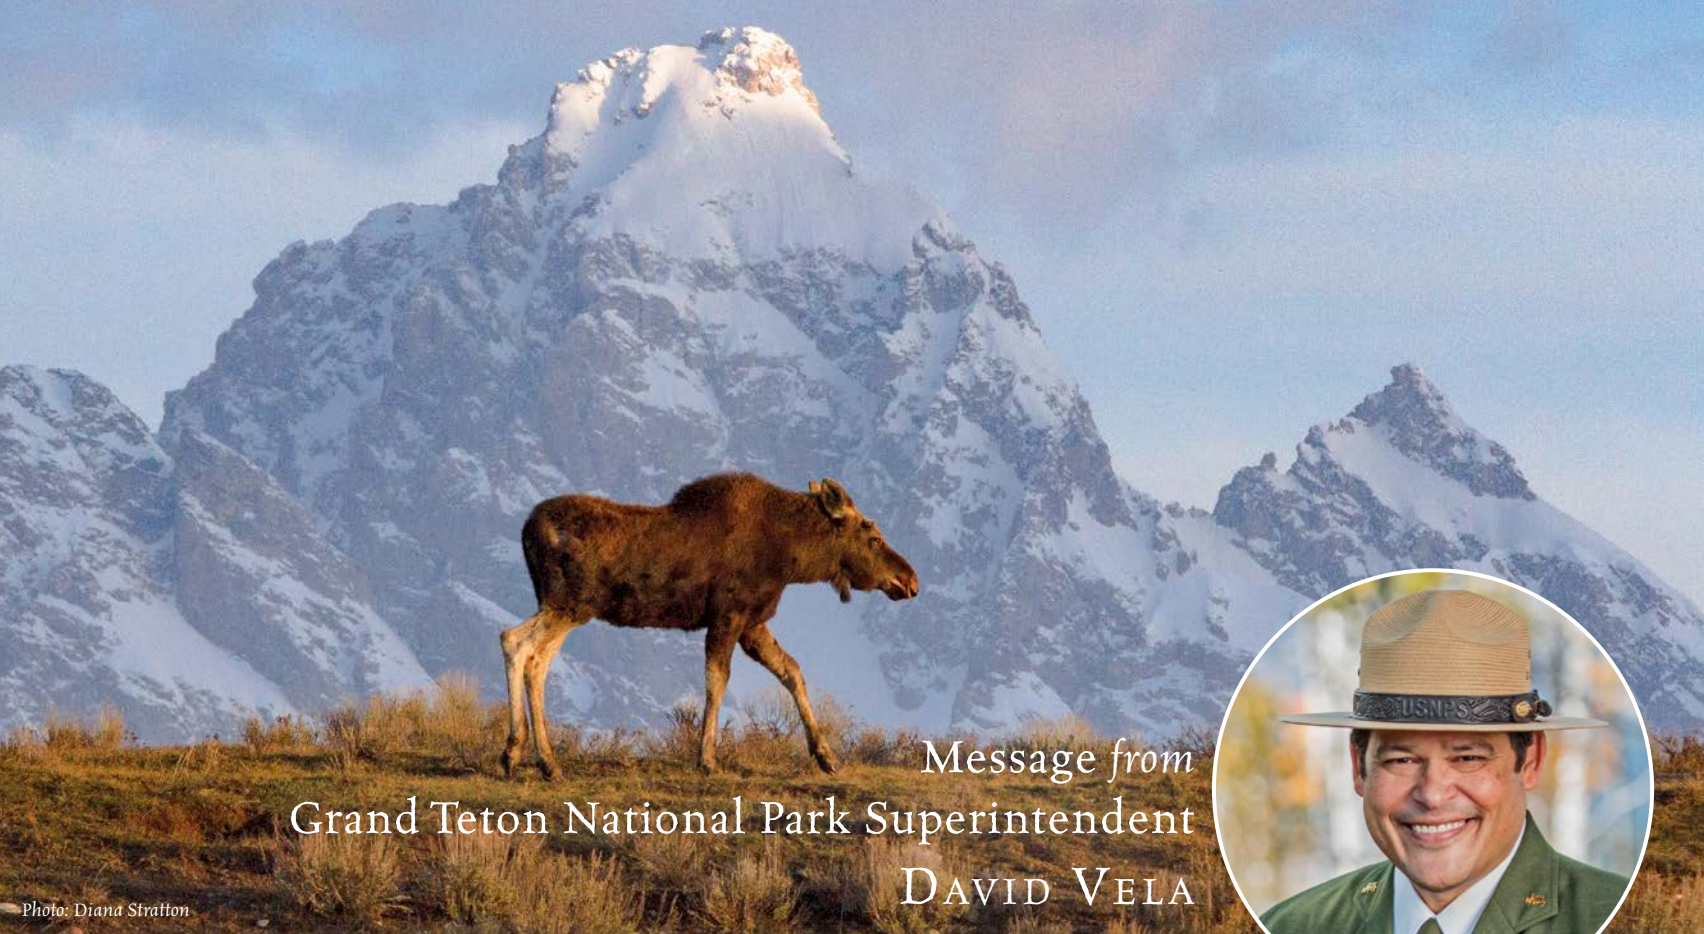

Jackson Lake

—Once the surface of Jackson Lake has a thick layer of ice (typically late December/early January), the surface provides a magnificent place for winter adventure. You can ski or snowshoe as far as you want and find beautiful views in every direction.

Grooming is slated to begin in mid-December and will continue through mid-March—but we need your support. Donate today by visiting www.gtnpf.org/donate and list “grooming” in the comments field. Thank you!

Grand Teton National Park is truly a treasure of the National Park Service, our country, and the world. Viewing this iconic landscape with its prominent peaks and meandering wild and scenic designated Snake River provides an array of emotional responses for many people.

Native American archaeological sites and historic structures of old dude ranches and homesteads remind us of the human footprint and stories that were part of this landscape.

While viewing the diversity of wildlife as one drives through the park or hikes the numerous trails, we are reminded of the wild character of this place. How fortunate we are to be working in partnership to fulfill the National Park Service mission to preserve the park's natural and cultural resources and provide for the enjoyment, education, and inspiration for this and future generations.

Our partnership interests were identified as a core value through Grand Teton Next: Strategies for Success. We embrace collaboration, trust, and open communication with our partners to achieve shared goals. Professionally and personally, I greatly value the relationships and in working together to create opportunities for success.

I also have the utmost gratitude for and take great pride in the significant accomplishments achieved over the past four years through the park's formal partnership with the Foundation. The passion, inspiration, and contagious spirit I have found with everyone associated with the Foundation is remarkable. Through our strategic plan, we have successfully aligned our priorities and worked together to contribute to the greater good and long-term benefit of the park and all who come to enjoy it.

On August 31, 2018, I was nominated by the President of the United States to serve as the 19th Director of the National Park Service. I am deeply humbled and excited to serve if confirmed by the U.S. Senate. I am also so deeply grateful to all who have supported me over the past twenty-nine years and who have helped to preserve and protect what has been described as "America's Best Idea"—our nation's national park units.

As we close yet another successful visitor season together, I applaud you all. Your work matters, it makes a difference, and is a shining example of what can happen through our partnership as well as your passion in protecting this majestic place.

Thank you!

In Memory of HELEN HALPIN 1928 - 2018

Helen Halpin was a dedicated supporter of Grand Teton National Park Foundation since our organization was founded by her late husband, Jerry Halpin, in 1997. Their passion for the park and sharing its wonders with visitors from across the globe will continue to serve as an inspiration for years to come.
